Part 1: An E-Mail - New York City or Grand Canyon National Park?

You are at the end of a high school year in Chicago. Before going back to Germany, you want to go on a 7-day trip with your Dutch friend Bart who you met during your stay. Bart, who lives in Detroit now, has sent you some information about two places he would really like to see.

New York City Travel Information

Transport: several airports, Greyhound terminal, numerous bus lines, subway, yellow cabs

Accommodation: anything from hostels to luxurious hotels

Attractions: famous sights such as the Empire State Building, the Statue of Liberty, Central Park, Madison Square Garden and many, many more

Food: multicultural dishes, fancy restaurants, grocery stores, regular fast food (prices usually higher than American average)

Grand Canyon National Park Travel Information

Transport: rental cars, several bus lines (from Las Vegas – about 300 miles away) and helicopter rides, guided tours

Accommodation: camping and hotels

Attractions: breathtaking scenery, fantastic nature walks, hikes into the canyon, the wild Colorado River and many more

Food: grocery store, fast food, restaurants

Send an e-mail back to him:

- Explain where you want to go.
- Suggest how to get there and where you want to stay.
- Say what you want to do there and why.

Write about 80 words. Count your words.

Part 2 - An Article: Looking back on your school time

Your American e-friend is doing a project on schools in other countries and has asked you to write an article about your school.

In your article...

- introduce your school (e.g. classmates, teachers, subjects)
- talk about what is special about your school (e.g. projects and events)
- explain what you dislike about your school and suggest how to improve it.

Write about 120 words. Count your words.
